Announcer: I'm here with Brad Stone from Cohen Highley Lawyers. How much can be awarded in personal injury lawsuits?

Brad Stone: In Canada personal injury lawsuits, for pain and suffering and loss of enjoyment of life there is a cap of three hundred and seventy-eight thousand dollars.

Announcer: That's it? What about these massive settlements you always hear about?

Brad Stone: Those would have income losses and future damage claims, which have no cap.

Announcer: Okay that's good, but it doesn't sound like a lot of money.

Brad Stone: Well, It's not, but our system does fully compensate for both economic loss and the costs of collecting a judgment are also awarded in Canada on a partial or a full scale.

Announcer: Thanks Brad. This has been the Cohen Highley Legal Moment.
